Ergonomics Software Leader Remedy Interactive Continues Staff Expansion with Two New Director Level Positions

SAUSALITO, CA - September 24, 2003 - In response to the industry's rapid acceptance of software solutions as options for effectively reducing injuries in the workplace, corporate safety software solution provider, Remedy Interactive (www.remedyinteractive.com), has filled two key positions on its management team. James ("Jamie") MacMillan has recently joined the team as Director of Sales, and Erik Andersen has accepted the new position of Director of Strategic Partnerships.

"As we continue to prove that our technology is effective at driving corporate performance, the opportunities to more broadly impact the risk management and the EH&S industries expand," says Kim Lopez, CEO of Remedy Interactive.

"These important additions to our team will allow us to more effectively bring our software solutions to our growing marketplace."

Mr. MacMillan brings a decade of experience developing and managing new business ventures in the North American and European markets. He has a successful track record selling technology and services to companies of all sizes including such Fortune 1000 companies as Philips, Ford, Bertelsmann, Sun Microsystems, and Dell Computers.

Mr. Andersen brings experience in business development, strategic alliances, and other outward-facing roles in complex, multi-national environments. He has designed and successfully executed on national and global partner strategies at PeopleSoft, Hewlett-Packard, and Federal Express.

"The experience and abilities of both Jamie and Erik will set the stage for Remedy Interactive's continued growth," continues Lopez. "Both positions will support Remedy Interactive's goals of designing, developing and delivering innovative software solutions to prevent workplace injuries."

Remedy Interactive's Office Ergonomics Platform (OEP) is a comprehensive, proven tool for preventing workplace injuries and cutting costs. The OEP has been rolled out to tens of thousands of users in more than 50 countries. Over 90% of users to date have made changes to their workstations to reduce their risk of injury and over 87% of users have said that they believe the OEP will help them to work more comfortably. Companies using the OEP expect these and
